PAP SMEAR, SCREENING FOR CERVICAL CANCER

Cervical cancer has gone from being the number one cancer killer for women in United States to number 13. And that is due, in a large part, to the increase in cervical cytology screening (pap smear). Now, far more lesions are found in a pre-invasive stage rather than invasive stage where treatment and prognosis is more ominous. Women that are diagnosed with pre-invasive lesions have a 5-year survival rate of 100% while when diagnosed in an invasive stage 5-year survival rate is 92%.

Almost 100% of squamous cell carcinoma of the cervix cases are related to high grade Human Papiloma Virus Infection, which is a sexually transmitted disease. The HPV infection does not always lead to cervical carcinoma, the virus can create a low-grade lesion that is almost never potentially malignant or a high-grade lesion that has a greater malignant potential if left untreated.

The purpose of screening is not only detecting early cervical cancer but also to detect and treat high-grade lesions before they transform into cancer. Even though a pap smear is very successful overall, its sensitivity for high-grade lesion is only 70-80% — that's probably related to small size lesions, inflammation, blood obscuring the slide or inaccessible localization of the lesion.

Approximately 50% of cervical cancer diagnoses are among women that have never had a pap smear and another 10% in women that have not have a pap in the past five years. While new American Cancer Society screening guideline includes a review of new cervical cancer screening tests, perhaps the largest gain in reducing cervical cancer incidence and mortality could be attained by increasing screening rates (regardless of the test used) among women who are currently unscreened or screened only infrequently. However, new technologies may offer advantages over what is already a successful screening test, when available.

It is recommended that screening start three years after beginning sexual intercourse, but not later than 21 years old. Establishing an age for starting pap smears insures that women get the test even if their provider doesn't ask patients about their sexual history and for adolescents who are unable or unwilling to disclose prior consensual and/or nonconsensual intercourse thus ensuring that young women, including victims of sexual abuse, are protected.

Provider discretion and patient choice, following counseling, should be used to guide the initiation of cervical cytology screening in young women aged 21 and older who have never had vaginal sexual intercourse and for whom the absence of a history of sexual abuse is certain.

Pap tests can be discontinued in women over 70 years of age that have had a normal satisfactory test for 3 consecutive years and no abnormal test over the past 10 years.

Pearl Jam Live @ the House of Blues, Orlando Florida April
12, Y2K+3

Although I have been a music journalist for years this was the first time that I'd seen Pearl Jam perform. It was an experience that was long overdue and quite rewarding. The band played a private show that was only available to winners of Orlando's, O Rock 105.9 on air promotion and their website promotion, the O Rock Passport. The limited number of tickets available provided for an intimate atmosphere that is uncommon for a band usually found in the arena and stadium circuit. Needless to say demand was outrageous with fans gathered outside the HoB desperate to get in.

Inside frontman Eddie Vedder and the boys cranked out tunes for over 2 & 1/2 hours, a feat rarely attempted by many of toady's pampered and primped stars. They dropped tunes from their latest LP Riot Act as well as classics from their previous studio albums and covers by their favorite artists including the Beatles, the Clash and The Who. The performance was webcast in it's entirety on Monday April 14 @ www.Realone.com. Visit the band's website @ www.PearlJam.com for a full account of their performance and setlist.

During the evening it was standing room only and after their third and final encore a brilliant version of "Fuckin' Up" the remaining crowd gathered by the stage as the crew began dismantling the set throwing guitar picks, cymbal spacers and whatever else to be discarded to the eager fans in waiting. The various memorabilia was accepted courteously by the fans known as the Family, a name given to their most dedicated fans. Throughout the evening the vibe was beautiful, it's obvious that there's unity in Pearl Jam's global community something that we can all appreciate and perhaps benefit from.

It's also reassuring to know there is still a band in existence that is as loyal to it's fans as they are to them. What band plays three encores? Besides the Grateful Dead (RIP) and Phish who else plays a show over two hours long? Who else is so motivated a sense of fairness that they boycott monopolies such as Ticketmaster? Could it be that of all the huge commercial acts today Pearl Jam is the only band that still knows what really matters?

When you experience a band in their element the only things that you walk away with should be Peace, Love, Unity and Respect. See you down in front.

Please pardon me, my slip is showing: in my last column I misspelled Karl Manchon's name. My sincerest apologies.

My, my, my, my my – the editor is just beside himself, says I run on too much and need to get to the point so there's more room for ads! Imagine, moi, running on! Never! And if he thinks he's going to edit me, well he's Speaking of fantastic, Walde at The Bellwood is looking forward to more people stopping in. I hear there was a group of women that had a fabulous time. What a good stop over to include in your Memorial Day Weekend.

Talk about checking things out; check out the pictures of karaoke at The Cold Keg on page 14. Looks like everyone was having a great time, but how do the dresses fit in? It sure isn't Leigh Shannon, she's always fabulous as you can tell from the rest of the pictures! And her guest performers are always something special too. It makes those CD parties real great events. As for events, The Cold Keg has big plans for Memorial Day Weekend – lots of stuff planned (see their ad – turn to page 15 don't look at the basket, read the words!).

And talking about feet, great things are afoot at Brevard Together. They've distributed a survey to find out more about what members want to do. So if you got one don't just sit there, fill it out and return it now! If you want to meet some Brevardians, join up — the info is in their ad on page 7. You can also meet some at Brevard Together's 5th Annual Pride Dinner Dance at the Holiday Inn, Indialantic, is on June 20. Get your tickets soon by calling Bernard at 321-777-3781 or Rhonda at Hair Biz, 321-783-4003.

Speaking of pride, the tickets for PFLAG Vero Beach's 4th Pride Dinner Dance at the Vero Inn on Saturday, June 14, are going fast. You need to get yours in the next couple of weeks to make sure you don't miss out. See their ad in the middle of this issue. As you can see PFLAG Vero Beach was very visible at the Walk for Life in Vero May 2-3. A great effort by all concerned resulted in over $1,000 raised! Once again they're involved in a great cause.

It's springtime. As the coldness of winter leaves, the grass and other plant life in our yards begin to grow again. Along with the grass and flowers, we also find weeds springing back after the barrenness of winter.

Whether you have a formal garden or just a yard, one has yard work to do if you choose to have a productive yard. (No wonder so many people live in apartments and condos). A place of beauty often requires much work.

But sometimes, no matter how hard a gardener works, some plants just won't grow and produce. Sometimes wild vines and weeds pop up overnight and choke out the healthy plants. Sometimes the soil is marginal or non-productive. Predators and other enemies to plant life can bring destruction.

Other times the ground is too hard because so many people have stepped on it and beaten it down. Many people feel like that. So many people have walked on them that it is difficult to have anything productive come from them.

In both the Hebrew Scriptures and the Christian Scriptures, we are referred to as God's garden. Just as a garden gives much delight and beauty (and food) to the gardener, we too can provide much to our world. We can add beauty, nourishment, and a safe place of peace and renewal. The ideal garden is a delightful place, full of refreshing aromas and flowers and produce.

There are times in each of our lives when we need some work in order to be more productive in life. Perhaps we need something to help break up the hardness that has developed in us due to the actions or words of others. Maybe we need the positive influence of others to help us. Or we need to find new sources of inspiration to feed our spirits.

As we allow positive influences to affect our lives, we become more productive in life. And as we become more productive, we help others become more productive. We shouldn't be afraid of outside influences that bring changes to our lives. The very changes that we are afraid of might be just the thing we need to help us become a more productive life form in the garden of life. ▼ state doesn't recognize the union, God does and we're happy to be able to announce it.

And wild is the word for the show at Club Byrd Cage a couple of weeks ago. When Kelli Randell called the winner of the Miss $1.69 contest up, she started stripping him! Then, last Friday Kelli appeared as a boy, seems an untimely tumble had ruled out her getting in drag, but true to form the show went on with special guests Felicia Blackheart, Dominique and Devine carrying the banner in style. There's a lot of excitement building about events at Club Byrd Cage in the next month. Keep checking their ads for the details.

See-saw, get it? Well, over at the Sawmill Campground, congrats to Miss Trailer Trash 2003, "Angie O'Plasty", who beat out Shanita Cocktail, Patty O'Furniture, Luciana Bella, Ann Thrax, Jacki Ohno, winning with a wonderful talent: making her man a Spam on white bread sandwich in a pleasing form, not to mention her personality and poise. The Boggy Creek Gang Camp for Children benefited from the bears' Tupperware party, hosted by David Cash from Jacksonville. There's always something fun going on at the Sawmill, for instance next weekend the leather boys will be there – all hot and sweaty, yum, yum!
